THE following extraordinary story is sent by its correspondent to the London Times, and is dated Paris, 28th ult.:—

I have had with a great Russian personage, who is in a condition to be well-informed, the following conversation, which must be read in connexion with the Dalziel Agency telegram dated San Francisco, 20th August, relating to a treaty between Russia and Korea. He says :--"The revolution at present going on in China is not, like that of the Taipings, directed against the Dynasty, but, on the contrary, it has been started by the Tsung-li Yamen, and the man who is really directing it is Li Hung-chang, the successor of the famous Marquis Tseng who is an intelligent man, and above all patriot. His plans consist in driving out the European element by opposing thereto an actual Chinese migration both on the Russian frontier, a length of 4,000 miles, and on that of Tongking. In the direction of the valley of the Lbi and the region of the Ussuri and the Amoor we have given back to China 15 millions of the yellow race, and the migration is still far from having reached its limit. A veritable barbaric invasion is what is conceived by these Chinese statesmen. The Black Flags were and still are in their pay. as also the alleged revolution, with their watchword Down with the foreigner. The Russian Government is defending itself against this invasion as well as it can by sending Cossack settlers in large numbers into the valley of LhL

Law is a very payable industry if managed properly. Five leading legal firms in Sydney net between £10,000 and £20,000 each per annum, which is a tolerable profit when you come to think that most of the work is done by clerks. Apropos of the magnificent salaries paid to managing clerks, a certain Australian solicitor sometime ago engaged a young English solicitor to conduct his business (salary, £150 per annum) while he toured the Continent. The Englishman annexed £2,000 and disappeared, and has never been captured although a warrant was issued for his arrest. Last Christmas the writer of this par came across the quondam managing clerk at a big coffee-palace in s neighbouring, province-where he held the onerous position of "boots."

CORRESPONDENCE,

[We do not necessarily endorse the opinions expressed by Correspondents in this column.]

To THE EDITOR OF THE "HOROKORO TELEGRAPH." SIR,—In your issue of the 27th inst. I read letter signed "Gauntlet," "re Mitchell and

In replying to the same I first wish to impress on the mercantile community that I neither know the above two gentlemen referred to, nor have any interests whatever in their behalf

The paragraph preceding Gauntlet's letter. referring to the first half, which you, (Ed. H.K.T. deemed it wise not to publish, with the view not to hurt the feelings of the two gentlemen named, I consider was a most prudent thing to do if it was even anything approaching the expressions contained in the first part of the letter published for the public to read. In my opinion is most scurrilous indeed.

I presume from the words "If our association." in Gauntlet's letter, that he is a member of the mercantile community, and I very much regret to think that he is, and that he should have so far forgotten himself as to write in the strain he has done; and at the same time I most sincerely hope that the expressions contained thereis will not meet with the approval of members of the profession.

"Gauntlet," in taking up the case of B, and versus Wilkinson (sec.) I quite agree with but at the same time feel sorry that he could not have done so in more gentlemanly language which would have tended to elevate the profession and not have a demoralising effect. Should be (Gauntlet) be an officer in the Mercantile Marine I would have him to understand that the definition of the same in my opinion is that of a "sailor and gentleman combined;" also that when anyone, irrespective of creed, caste, colour or nationality may have grievance, or fancy that a gross injustice has been done, I cannot imagine a more satisfactory manner of assuring themselves whether they are right or wrong than through the medium of the press, and that the " Hongkong Talegraph," the Editor of which paper exemplifies that old saying "/ riend in need is a friend in deed." But for heaven's sake let the public have eloquence without ignorance, and not shew a deprayed mind such as "Gauntlet" has done in trying to vindicate the case of Mr. Wilkinson.

That Mr. Wilkinson acted wrongly refusal of duty there can be no ing, but at the same witime on his committal to prison. Refusal of duty at sea amounts to mutiny, but in harbour, it might be overlooked by simply asking the officer to resign. In saying this, I may be even suggesting what might not have been an easy matter, as in viewing a case it must be done from both sides -employer and employee. What may have been sultable to the employee may not have been convenient to the employer, such as that the vessel may have been ready, or nearly ready, to proceed to sea, and it may have caused detention which means expense) till the officer could have

In conclusion I express my deepest sympathy with Mr. Wilkinson, and most sincerely hope that when he comes out of prison, the fact saving been there will not be the cause of other

The Russians can readily be proved to have no right to annex up to the Hindu Kush, for in 1873 Gereral Kaulmann, Governor of Turkestan, reported that the Chinese frontier extended westwards to Wakhan, in the eastern portion of which Victoria Lake lies. This was accepted at St: Petersburg at the time as being an accurate definition of the boundaries. and nothing has happened since to alter its validity. The Russians are now reported to be collecting stores and erecting quarters for troops at Shikh Junid, on the Kushk river, some fifty miles south of Panideh and eighty north of Herat. The Marion, from Behring Strait via Honolulu, en route for the Yangtsze is expected here shortly, to coal. From Vladivostock we expect three Russian men-of-war, also en route for the Yangize, to coal here; they are the Korella, the Admiral Nachimeft, and the Pamiat Avova. The latter is the one that took the Czarewitch out to the Far East; I don't think she will be able to come up to Shanghai, and will have very much that Messrs. B. & S. should have to stay at Woosung. I also hear from Vladivostock that out of the of convicts broke adrift, only eight more are at arge, the rest having been recaptured, or otherwise accounted for-imagine how !

The fortnight's stay of the French vessels in Vladivostock has been marked by no extraordinary enthusiasm, as at Croustadt; only one official dinner took place, and that was on the anniversary of the Czar's patron saint's day, offered by the Russian Admiral in command twelve covers were laid. It was unfortunate that a French officer should have been killed by the escaped convicts ; it damped the general spirit, and cast a general gloom over the visit from the French Republic. To this general dulness the news of the sudden death of the Grand Duchess Alexandra may have contributed not a little the more so, as it was bruited about the Nihillsts had something to do with it; but I really believe that it has been a sheer accident, October 17th.

I see by your leading article, written from information obtained from the Peking correspondent of the Daily Press, that the Shantung troops refuse to serve under the present Governor. I do not think there is a bit of truth in it.

I may also remark that the Nanking correspondent to the Recorder, "D. W. N.," and his conversation with the military man is "bosh," His military man is supposed to say :- "The attacks on Foreign property were in order to make the Government suffer by having to pay for the property destroyed." It is a well-known fact that the military hate, foreigners just as the literati. The military do not display it so much because the position they hold prevents them, but when the literati get up a riot and the military come along to help the foreigners, they help them with a vengeance. As a rule they join the mob and help them to rob and sack Foreign premises, and encourage the mob. advise the Foreigners never to trust the military in the case of a riot, or they will trust to a very rotten stick.

The Daily Press correspondent is nearer the fact when he says :- "Nobody but Li Hungchang can deal successfully with the crisis." But Li looks first to himself and his own interests, and we may be sure he will not move unless he is down right forced to. While the trouble is in the Yangize Valley, Vicercy Li does not-care a pin; he is quite happy to have trouble in that quarter. It is just what he wants. He wants China, in fact the world, to see that where he rules as High Commissioner of the North all is quiet and tranquil. He wants the world to see the difference between his power and the power of his colleague the High Commissioner of the South, Liu Kun-yi, who has been so graciously favoured by their Majesties against his wishes. In the South, he says, there are riots and rebelflon, but here in the north, we have peace, and loyalty.. Li is foolish enough to think that he has been the means of causing a split amongst foreign nations. No doubt he has done his best pleased that Russia has sent a favourite subjec -Prince Vastrinsky-who is to travel through China, Tongking, Annam, Siam, India, and Central Asia, back to St. Petersburg, on a tour of inspection. Li managed successfully to degrade Admiral Lang last year in a British port by pulling down his flag, and he knows well enough how to arrange with Great Britisn; and the cry of "wolf" don't scare him a little bit.

It does not look as if England were likely go to war with China, when only yesterday the British Consul here, accompanied by Capt. Harvey, R.N., who is agent for the Nordenfeldt guns, and who lately landed some of these guns at Taku, called upon Li. The call was made to push these guns against Krupp's 10 c. se. guns but Li did not even trouble himself to go to Taku to see them fired. It does not look much like war when we see Great Britain and Germany vicing with each other in the sale of arms. knows what he is about. He is not blind, but knows well enough that by making a good contract for arms or railway material with either England, France or Germany that he can buy or sell either country. Only let trouble come along to the North, let men-of-war muster there and threaten Taku, Tientsin or Peking, then you will see the wily old Viceroy on his hind legs scurrying around, willing to do anything and come to any terms. What fools we Foreigners are after all !- Shanghal Mercury.

BOGUS. BANKS.

The closing months of 1891 promise favourably to see the death and burial of most of the bogus three years," that it may have time to burst banks of Australia. Within the last few years these institutions have broken out like an epidemic in all parts of this continent, but more more particularly in New South Wales. They mostly arose suddently and without warning. In nine or ten, provided the deposit is renewed for the evening there was only a void, and in the a further term, which is an open and unvarnished morning there was a full-grown bank, with an acknowledgment that the institution desires, enormous paid-up capital, and a ponderous at any cost, to avoid repayment as long as posreserve fund, and a large sum to the credit of sible. H.M.S. Redopole reached here from Chin- general manager and its auditors—in the how- when his last payment is made, it has a preference Australian private bank started as an imposture

There are certain infallible signs by which the last available cent from everybody concerned. bogus banks can be invariably distinguished from those other institutions which were built to last, instead of being merely built to burst. In Mr. Ma Kle-tcheong left here via Chefoo for the first place, none, or hardly any, of them had any visible beginning. They appeared in a fullgrown state, without notice or any apparent process of formation. Even in a country where money is much more plentiful than in Australia, It is said that the Viceroy of Nanking, the organisation of a great financial institution although one of the directors of the C. M. S. N. is a work of time. It is necessary to get the Co., with Li Hung-chang, has memorialized the capital together, and the list of shareholders is generally made up of the names of well-known to the losses is laid, on the shoulders of Taotal | capitalists. But the majority of the new "banks" of recent years went through no preliminary The Wuchang and Hacting managed to get stage whatever, so far as the public eye could to the Bund last night, and are now on their discern, and the £200,000 or so of paid-up way down the river. At 2.40 this morning the capital was subscribed mostly by uncertificated insolvents, tenth-rate pawnbrokers, cheap and gaudy clerks, and miscellaneous individuals in the Tientsin Bend last night, and will remain, unpaid-for clothes, who had formerly lived, with there till the Hasting gets off the ground so as no visible means of support, as commissionagents with no commissions, or as money-lenders By the Helnyll, Prince Vastrinsky and suite with no money to lend. They were shifty-The Board of Admiralty at Peking has issued | almost all were otherwise shady. All combined the smallest bank that ever existed, without turning a hair, was a palpable absurdity. The manager of the institution was generally fit and appropriate company for the founders, inasmuch as he seldom looked like a man whom any sane board would leave in an unchained condition in the vicinity of any capital-paid-up or otherwise. The board, as already mentioned, consisted mostly of certain obscure persons, all of whom were denominated "Esq." Half of them gave no addresses, and the other half hailed from localities where capital is notoriously scarce. And, finally, the auditors were almost invariably some new individuals who had just opened a small office in a back street, and who had no reputation to lose if they attested and swore to the solvency of everything and everybody in one act. The bogus bank, having got over its prelimi nary stage, and emerged into the present tense may also be known by the manner in which pays lavish dividends and hungers after deposits that are fixed for three years, in particular-at any price. It professes to make its income by discounting bills, granting overdrafts, and lending out money on mortgage, and in all these branches of industry it is almost impossible to realise more than 7 per cent. all round on steady average. The legitimate bank, therefore, seldom pays anything like a respectable dividend for the first few years of its existence. I lends out its own capital; it also receives immense sums on current account without interest, and lends a considerable portion of them-the returns therefrom being clear profit : it prints notes and lends them at interest-another item which is mostly profit; it pays small rates for deposits, and makes advances at high rates with the proceeds; it gains a small but never-failing income from the accidental destruction of notes which go out in exchange for hard cash and never come back; and even i with all these and many other sources of income its progress is generally slow. It is only when a large reserve fund has been accumulated that the genuine bank begins to pay large dividends; to turn the current away from China, He is and even then in a period of great depression it often gets into serious difficulties. The National Bank of New Zealand, as a fair example, has written off more than two-thirds of its capital in losses resulting, not so much from bad management, as from hopeless stagnation; and all the profits of what is commonly termed "legitimate banking" have proved insufficient to make business profitable. But the bogus bank-a term which probably covers three-fourths of the institutions which have sprung up of recent years -has hardly any of these advantages. It has very little paid-up capital to lend-of that fact the long lists of notoriously impecunious directors is a sufficient guarantee. It makes little or no profit out of current accounts, for it pays interest on them, usually at a liberal rate. has no note issue, and thus a most valuable source of revenue is cut off; and it pays tremendous rates of interest for deposits, which is the one never-failing sign that disaster must come to somebody-or everybody-at some period in the near future. Also, though its visible income is infinitesimal and precarious it almost invariably pays larger dividends from the very beginning than does the legitimate bank with all its mostly by taking in deposits and lending out the money of depositors, and in most cases it pays for these deposits about two per cent, more than it can possibly hope to realise even in the most profitable branch of business. The working expenses of the establishment, the rents, the lavish salaries, and the bad debts are all unprovided for, and there is a dead loss besides. Therefore the dubious bank always offers its most lurid terms for deposits that are "fixed for decently, or to bolt, or to pass on the responsibility, before the day of repayment arrives. And in many cases it even offers an additional inducement of one or two per cent. on top of the original Hebrew with an overhanging beak, a pot of obviously a person who would undertake anyless remote connection with time-payment he wants to borrow money from the public at 10 perpetual annuities to everybody is a valu thing pay for officers qualified to act as interpreters.

The fraudulent bank is the only institution's its kind which ever inserts the goodwill of its business as a valuable asset in its balance-sheet It is the only institution which professes to have commenced husiness by buying up the valuable connection of some impoverished individual who owned nothing but a small office, and paying him a large sum in cash as an equivalent; and when this is done it may be safely assumed that. there was no business to buy, and no capital to buy it with, and that the sum in question was stolen out of the deposits and divided among the directors. It is also the only establishment whose balance-sheets show a record of absolutely unfailing prosperity The genuine bank, however successful, has its years of depression and loss, but the murky concern, which offers such surprising terms for deposits, always announces in lavish profit, no matter how ruinous the times may be. . It may be known also by the fact that profit is always represented by the increase in the two items, "Advances" and "Freehold Property." other banks these items often decline, while the item "cash on hand" increase; but in the bogus Yunnan, to Tonquin, Annam and Siam, and in gaol some of them were endowed with allases, institution the supply of actual coin is always limited, and the whole profits are concentrated under the two headings above-mentioned. This fact looks all the more surprising at a time like your port, urging them to act at once in regard | the semblance of affluence, and the assertion | the present, when freehold property is falling in value daily, and it is difficult to find good securities on which to make advances; but the explanation is sufficiently easy. The advances increase, because the directors and the manager. and the manager's uncle and the directors' brothers, have all taken large overdrafts out of the depositors' money, and "blewed" the proceeds on horses, or jewellery, or wild-cat mines, or ladies with golden hair, and as the money will never be repaid, they charge themselves 40 per cent, interest with light heart, and the interest keeps the asset called "advances" piling up in the balancesheet, and the balance-sheet brings more deposits, and out of the deposits more dividends are paid and more advances made, and all is joy and screnity. And the "freehold property" also mounts up, because the company bought land to the value of £10,000, on which £9000 is still owing; and collected £4000 in instalments from credulous purchasers, and the land is now worth only £6000 in a falling market, notwithstanding over France, especially in Paris: It has a tenwhich fact, the complaisant valuator has given his certificate that the property is now good and. sufficient value for £13,000. And because of the surprising prosperity manifested under these two headings, the "goodwill" has also been written up 30 per cent., and thus a glorious future is assured for everybody concerned.

The bogus bank might possibly eke out precarious, hand-to-mouth existence on the summit of a land-boom, but in times of depression, or even in times of moderate prosperity, its case is absolutely hopeless. Therefore, i becomes a mere sepulchre for lost deposits, and a burial-place for dead shareholders, and makes hardly a pretence of solvency. Its one unfailing fenture is its censeless hunger after deposits, Other banks at times almost hesitate to receive these, when profitable outlets are scarce, and they are paying interest on money which is lying idle in their vaults, but the bogus bank clamours for them at all times and on almost any terms. It will cheerfully undertake to pay nine or ten per cent, to depositors, and ten per cent. more to shareholders, and will offer at the same time to lend money to the public at live or six, quite regardless of the fact that thereby loses some 15 per cent, in addition to working expenses. It never does, lend the money to the public, of course, for some of it goes to stave off impatient creditors, the rest is scrambled for by the directors and the staff; and It is regardless of the 15 per cent. loss-it would lose 65 per cent. with equal calmness. Its books are chaos; its balance sheet is constructed by putting down any figures that will show a profit of 45 per cent.; its officials drift into a state of maudlin recklessness in which they collar the money almost openly as it comes in, and buy jewellery with it; and its paid-up capital and reserve-funds are between £300,000 and £400,000. And then some day a creditor who won't be staved off presents a claim for £100, and after that there is nothing but general smash and emptiness: Sooner or later they mostly go the same road. The bank whose one ambition is to get deposits fixed for three years on any terms is utterly and absolutely hopeless, and even Peruvian bonds or the repudiated debentures of Honduras are more promising than its securities. And then the liquidation comes on as the final act, and all is over. Nobody sends the directors and manager into penal servitude, for there is a doubt in the alleged mind of the court whether the case was one of fraud or mere negligence. Nobody gaols the auditor who swore to the company's prosperity, though he was obviously either a gross swindler or a person who obtained money under false pretences, inasmuch as he pretended to be an auditor and yet couldn't or didn't audit. The only individual who comes to grief is the junior clerk who got demoralised and took a hand in the general scramble at the last moment, and bought a bangle for a barmald with the proceeds, And the law always drops on him like billions of bricks, for the code of this Christian land is built that way .- Syndey Bulletin.
